Marina4Art.com also features photographic art from LaChapelle and Minter, as well as pieces from up-and-coming artists, Aoshima, Bracey, Dzama and Kelley.

Meet Marina Romanova-Arnott

Born and raised in Russia, Marina Romanova-Arnott attended the University of Moscow, earning a master's degree in fine arts in 1992. A remarkable time and place to come of age as an artist, as communism was collapsing and artists were challenging convention, rebellion was suddenly as welcome in the Russian art scene as it was on the Russian streets.

Feeling the need to spread her artistic wings, Romanova-Arnott moved to New York City in 1992 and then to West Hollywood in 1994. Through her transition, Romanova-Arnott's own artistic style evolved, weaving in abstract impressionism with influences of surrealism.

Over the last decade, Romanova-Arnott's own work, in oil, acrylic, watercolor and mixed media has evolved again from abstract impressionism to a direction uniquely her own.

While Romanova-Arnott doesn't like to explain her paintings, with each piece, she hopes to create something that will not only challenge people's thought processes, but also lead them on a journey to find meaning in both the piece and their own lives.

As Romanova-Arnott's own art has evolved, she has also become an accomplished art collector, the catalyst of Marina4Art.com. Her eclectic collection ranges from offbeat lithos to exceptional pieces from known leaders of the contemporary, pop and urban art movements.

Marina4Art.com was designed to create an online destination in which Romanova-Arnott can share not only her collection, but also her passion with collectors from around the world.
